Let's Build Something Meaningful

MESSAGE FROM OUR PRESIDENT

Dear LMHI Members,

I recently had the privilege of attending the World Homeopathy Day celebrations in South Africa as the President of our esteemed organization. I must say, it was an incredible experience. Not only was it wonderful to spend time with Dr. Bianca de Canha, our NVP for South Africa, but the event was also expertly organized by the Homeopathy Association of South Africa.

During my visit, I had the opportunity to see firsthand the amazing work being done by the Khula Natural Health Centre, which provides crucial healthcare services to the local community. The dedication and effort of the doctors and staff at the center were truly inspiring and heartwarming.

Additionally, I was amazed by the quality of education and facilities at the homeopathy departments of the Durban University of Technology and the University of Johannesburg. The commitment to excellence in teaching and research was evident.

And last but certainly not least, it was a joy to announce the introduction of the Homeopathy Rose, Rosa Homeopathica. This beautiful flower will serve as a symbol of our love and commitment to the healing art of homeopathy.

Overall, my trip to South Africa was an enriching and unforgettable experience, and I am grateful to have had the opportunity to witness the positive impact of homeopathy in this part of the world.

LMHI WEBINAR: "CLINICAL CASE REPORTS: FROM ANECDOTES TO USEFUL TREASURES" BY DR. ROBBERT VAN HASELEN

LMHI has a new project for all its members: the setting of webinars on important topics in homeopathy given by outstanding homeopaths.

The first webinar was held on February 25, 2023. It opened with the lecture "Clinical case reports: from anecdotes to useful treasures" by Dr. Robbert van Haselen, homeopath and researcher, director of the International Institute for Integrated Medicine and the World Integrated Forum. He runs a project that aims to foster "critical thinking" in both research and education, including how this can be applied to improving the quality of clinical case reports.

In the webinar, Dr. Van Haselen discussed that practicing homeopaths, in addition to being good clinicians, must acquire skills such as critical thinking and decision-making to reduce bias in case-taking and clinical case reporting.

Case reports are very important for homeopathy. It is therefore important to reflect further on how the quality of case reports can be further improved.

This webinar explored the key elements that contribute to the generation of high-quality clinical case reports: 1) improving the reliability of the information in the repertories and Materia Medicas, 2) Improving case taking and decision-making in clinical practice, and 3) Improving the writing up and publication of case reports.

This webinar further explained some of the biases that can affect the reliability of the information in repertories as well as the reliability of the remedy selection process in clinical practice. Furthermore, the important role of reporting guidelines in improving the quality of clinical case reports was explained. Some pointers were given, on how practitioners can address biases in clinical practice. The essential role of practitioners in improving the scientific quality of clinical case reports was highlighted.

We look forward to seeing you in the next webinar coming soon.

Coffee is one of the most used beverage in the world and has been for several centuries.

Dr. Samuel Hahnemann wrote a treatise where he unfolded meticulously all the primary and secondary effects of daily coffee consumption, explained how badly and unnaturally its abuse impacts almost every organ of the body and informed us about the rational and wise application of this medicinal substance.
